FIRST NATIONS OF THE SALISH SEA

Indian Reserves and Reservations

Modern Settlements of British Columbia First Nations Participating in the BC Treaty Process

Modern Settlements of BC First Nations (All) Participating in the BC Treaty Process

Modern Settlements of Washington State First Nations

Core Traditional Territory (Statement of Intent) of First Nations Participating in the BC Treaty Process

First Nations not currently participating in the BC Treaty process have not made a Statement of Intent (SOI) publicly available and so do not have a Core Traditional Territory represented on this map.

Although the modern settlements of some of these First Nations communities are not on an "Island" in the Salish Sea, these settlements are an extremely important part of their First Nations cultures.

Core Traditional Territory (Statement of Intent) of West Coast and Fraser Valley First Nations Participating in the BC Treaty Process

The Coast Salish World

Recognizing family relationships, cultural practice and historical context, for the continued exercise of Aboriginal rights.

Where the Statement of Intent/Core Traditional Territory data overlaps, the colours and borders are an inaccurate reflection of the actual territories (see legend).

The Statement of Intent/Core Traditional Territory data was obtained from the BC Ministry of Sustainable Resource Management in 2002. This dataset has been updated to include the new Puyallup Treaty Group Statement of Intent/Core Traditional Territory boundaries.

The Coast Salish World boundary was developed by the Puyallup Treaty Group in consultation with the Coast Salish.

For further information on the First Nations listed on this map or Treaty Negotiations in BC, consult the Individual First Nations, the BC Treaty Negotiations Office or the BC Treaty Commission.

This map was produced in January 2006 by the SalishKootenai Treaty Group.